Should I convert my Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA?

In 2010, anyone can convert their regular IRA money to a Roth IRA, regardless of their income level. Uncertainty and volatility in the financial markets and the economy, as well as in the political, legislative, and tax policy response to this uncertainty create both risk and opportunities for IRA and retirement plan owners who are considering converting some or all of the tax-deferred IRAs and/or retirement plan accounts to Roth IRAs. Does it make sense to pay taxes NOW on some of my traditional IRA accounts by converting them to Roth IRA accounts to avoid paying taxes later? These are complicated calculations with numerous assumptions, but we can help! Call for an appointment.

Residential Energy Credit for 2009

It's back! The energy credit that expired in 2008 is back for this year (2009). This credit allows homeowners' to make qualified energy efficiency improvements to their homes while earning a Federal tax credit at the same time. These improvements include: insulation, exterior windows and doors, storm windows, metal or asphalt roofing, geothermal pumps, and solar heating systems just to name a few. These improvements must all be qualified, so check the details before making the upgrade! For more information, contact us, or check out the energy star website at: (www.energystar.gov).

We take our work very seriously at Smith & Company, but we also like to have fun! Here is some accounting humor:

Q: How do you drive an accountant completely insane?

A: Tie him to a chair, stand in front of him and fold up a road map the wrong way.
